Sandy has been practicing labor and employment law for nearly 30 years, and is well versed in all aspects of the practice. She litigates for employers in federal and state court cases involving wage and hour issues, discrimination and harassment claims, disputes over unfair competition and trade secrets, whistleblowing claims, and more. She tries cases to juries as well as in labor arbitrations, and also represents employers in front of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, the California Civil Rights Department, the Division of Labor Standards Enforcement, the National Labor Relations Board, and the Department of Labor. Her complex litigation experience is also vast, having led teams in the successful defense of federal and state class actions involving overtime, on-call time, meal/rest breaks, and business expenses, to name a few.

Sandy counsels employers to help them avoid litigation on all employee matters. She regularly consults on every aspect of the employment relationship, including wage and hour issues, leaves of absence, union relations, protection of trade secrets, and compliance with complex California labor laws. She also leads teams in employment compliance audits, negotiates and drafts various agreements between employees and employers, and works with clients to develop workable, defensible personnel practices and procedures.
