Robert's practice focuses on providing legal guidance to public entities across all aspects of their business. He specializes in water law, construction law, and public entity representation, providing comprehensive legal guidance on construction matters, public contracting, and procurement processes. His practice encompasses drafting and advising clients on requests for proposal, drafting and negotiating alternative delivery model construction contracts, and ensuring compliance with public contracting requirements. He also handles litigation and informal dispute resolution of construction claims.

Robert's background in construction litigation for large-scale public infrastructure projects allows him to identify and mitigate potential disputes before they arise. His work bridges the critical intersection of construction law and public procurement, offering clients a unique perspective drawn from both litigation and transactional experience.
