Allison Harvey focuses her practice on appellate and business litigation, with additional experience in health care and medical staff matters. She brings careful research and persuasive writing to her civil appeals. Her health care work includes administrative proceedings, representing medical staffs, skilled nursing facilities, and residential care facilities. She also writes and speaks on appellate developments and legislation affecting hospitals and medical staffs. Allison maintains an active pro bono practice.

Allison supports clients through the phases of litigation, from discovery and law and motion practice to mediation, trial, and appeal. She also leads discovery, helps prepare witnesses for depositions, and helps clients assess case strategy and explore settlement opportunities. A former NCAA Division I softball player at Princeton, Allison brings the teamwork and competitive edge of collegiate athletics to her practice.
