Solange advises cities, special districts, and other public agencies on general municipal and environmental law, land use, and contract matters. She counsels special district staff, as well as appointed and elected officials, on the questions that arise in day-to-day public agency operations.

Her land use work includes guiding municipal clients on accessory dwelling unit development, measures addressing homelessness, and California Environmental Quality Act questions affecting housing projects. She has worked alongside city code enforcement officers to bring properties into compliance with municipal codes, the Fire Code, and the Health and Safety Code, and she has helped city staff with contract formation and negotiation with both private parties and other public entities.

Solange also represents public agency clients and their employees in civil litigation arising out of municipal operations.
